Homemakers Items

June newlyweds who are shopping for furniture may be wondering where to spend and where to save.

Miss Ruth Jamison, house furnishings specialist at VPI, has some tips for shoppers with a limited budget.

Spend as heavily as possible on such items as sofa bed, lounge chair, rug, spring and mattress. They are necessities and long-term investments. It is well to buy good, permanent storage units, such as a good dresser and chest that can be used in any room of the house.

Favor open stock rather than whole suites. Remember you can sleep just as well on a good mattress and springs on legs, or a frame, as on a bedstead. A second-hand or a ready-to-paint bureau will hold your clothing as well as a new one. Spend here, or substitute, as you need to.

Avoid dining room suites. You may move and have no dining room. A sturdy drop leaf table and chest of drawers can be used anywhere in the house should you move.

You can save on lamps by buying several of the "knocked down" variety. Try painting them with black lacquer and choosing plain lamp shades. You can also save on end tables, bookshelves, and draperies.

Cut the legs off inexpensive card tables to sofa height. Cover with marbelized paper and paint the legs to match. Book shelves can be planned chest-height to hold the lamp, books and flowers. Use one shelf as a table. Put a chair near by.

Save on draperies and shades. Don't use them. Instead, use a natural cotton that will not fade, heavy enough to screen the light and provide privacy when drawn. Use deep double hems so they can be let down when they shrink.

Skimp on chairs. Those modified captains' chairs found in some mail order catalogues are smart. You can stain and finish them natural, or paint them a gay color. A set of six will be enough for the dining area and the living room for the first few years.

Don't forget that if you have a keen eye and lots of elbow grease, you can benefit from bargains in some second-hand furniture shops. Streamlining and refinishing will make old furniture look like new.

RULES ON GI HOME BUILDING LOAN USE

At the close of 1954 Virginia veterans had acquired 52,806 homes under the GI home loan program. The number of homes started in 1954 under VA guaranty was more than double that of the preceding year and applications have been pouring in thus far in 1955 in even greater numbers. The VA sees no sign of the slightest let up in home construction in the state for the next few months.

One of the basic requirements in the guaranty by the VA of loans for the purchase or construction of dwellings is that the veteran must have a bona fide intention of occupying the property as his home. A veteran is making improper use of his entitlement, if before his loan is closed, he arranges to sell or convey the property to a third party. Some veterans holding certificates of eligibility older than one year may not have been informed that there may be no traffic in VA loan guaranty privileges. Within the past year the VA has been attaching a warning to each Certificate of Eligibility issued which directly calls attention to the grave consequences which may follow if the veteran knowingly trades his certificate contrary to law. The veteran must certify on the loan application that he intends to occupy as his own home the dwelling he is buying or building. A false statement in applying may mean immediate suspension from GI Loan privileges, with resulting financial loss and forfeiture forever after of all other veterans' benefits, such as compensation, pension, subsistence allowance, and hospfitalization.

Lenders, builders and sellers who knowingly participate in misuse of entitlement may also suffer financial loss and disqualification from further GI home loan transactions.

After a veterans' loan is closed and he has moved into his new home he then may, for reasons arising after taking possession, rent the property just as any purposes of any property he title to. Even before the closed, but having certain intention to reside permanently dwelling, a veteran may property in good faith prove foreseen circumstances arise the sale necessary. Such stances could be transfer of of employment, death of the family, or other compelling sons clearly not of fraudulent nivance.

stown Festival To Be Big Event of 1955

Va.- Plans are well for the year-long ance in 1957 that the Jamestown Festi- ues national and per- al attention on Virwill celebrate the of the first perma- of Englishmen in began at Jamestown This was also the first of the British Em- ilish early America took ues and customs.

ens here, one State ge, are planning the the Virginia 350th Commission headed by A. McMurran, Jr., of and Warwick, and Jamestown - Williams- Celebration Com- by Robert V. Hatch- surance executive. mmission has set up the Virginia 350th lebration Corporation headed by retired Lieutenant General Withers A. Burress, of Richmond to direct the fund-raising and other commercial aspects of the observance. All three groups share officers in the Travis House here.

Parke Rouse, Jr., of Williamsburg is executive director of the State Commission, and Colonel Harold K. Roberts, of Richmond, is administrative director of the Federal Commission.

"We are moving along toward a really significant celebration," Mr. Rouse said, "and we hope to have the officials of every county, city and town get in touch with us and work with us in planning for its success."

Colonel Roberts pointed out that Governor Thomas B. Stanley had suggested such cooperation in an open letter to Virginians and that President Eisenhower had just written to Chairman Hatcher approving the basic plans for the Festival to date.

These plans call for centering the Festival, in general, around the historic triangle of Jamestown, Williamsburg and Yorktown, and between the dates April 26, 1957, anniversary of the colonists' landing at Cape Henry, and October 30, 1957, anniversary of the provisional agreement at Paris in 1782, by which the world recognized the independence of the United States.

But the plans call for year - long observance of the 1957 milestone by as many communities as possible. by all those, in fact, that have attractions to show the public or can create an attraction on the theme of Virginia's importance to the nation, present or past. A special effort will be made to invite Virginians now living elsewhere to visit the State for a homecoming reunion with friends and family.

The celebration will be "decentralized." The Norfolk area, for example, will be the scene of the April 26 ceremonies commemorating the April 26 landing. The State Fair will display in the fall of 1957 the State's progress since 1607 in agriculture and commerce, and enable Richmond to be the scene of another Festival event. So the Festival will go, reaching down to many smaller communities.

Preparations are moving along in this immediate area of the Festival.

The National Park Service has authorized and has in hand $4,600,000 for improving tour roads in the Yorktown Battlefield area and for extending the Colonial Parkway which now links Yorktown and Williamsburg, from Williamsburg to Jamestown. Work is well advanced.

The State Highway Department has allocated $500,000 for road improvement, including extension of dual-laning between Williamsburg and Richmond, in the year beginning July 1, 1955.

The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities has just given permission for the State to restore Virginia's Third State House, built in 1665 and burned in 1676 by Nathaniel Bacon's rebellion against British tyranny, on Jamestown Island.

The Naturalized Citizens of America, Inc., a Richmond group, have agreed to seek funds to reconstruct the three small ships that brought the original 104 colonists to Jamestown, so visitors can board at least one of the ships as they lie off Jamestown Island in 1957. The hope is also to restore the log-constructed, triangular James Fort of 1607.

The Park Service has appropriations pending in Congress to build a $300,000 Information Center or exhibition building at Jamestown and a $350,000 similar building at Yorktown that should attract thousands at either end of the Parkway.

One of the most interesting exhibits of all will be the "glasshouse" or glass factory of 1608, which will be restored on Glasshouse Point, just opposite Jamestown Isalnd, by Glass Crafts of America, Inc., a group of glass-making firms. Here visitors will be able to see glass made as it was done in Captain John Smith's time.

NEWS FOR VETERANS

Veterans Administration received 53,667 applications for the guaranty of GI home loans during April, 1955, the ninth straight month it has topped the 50,000 mark, VA announced.

The April total was 2,526 above the 51,141 applications received by VA in March and 57 per cent more than the 34,103 received in April, 1954.

GI home loan applications are submitted to VA by private lenders making the mortgage loans on behalf of World War II and Korean conflict veterans. VA then guarantees repayment of a portion of the loan.

During April, VA received appraisal requests for 105,28? proposed and existing homes. This was 6,555 units under the peak of 11,700.

$311,374 Per Day ...

Last year the Norfolk and Western paid a total of $79,089,000 in wages and salaries. This is an average of $311,374 every working day in the year . . . an increase of $23,023,000 over the payroll of 10 years ago.

These railroad employee payroll dollars ring cash registers in every town and city along the Norfolk and Western.

They are used to buy food, build homes and pay rents . . . to buy and operate automobiles . . . to pay insurance premiums and provide medical care . . . to pay taxes, support charities and increase bank deposits . . . to purchase fuel, clothing, entertainment, utilities, service, furniture and appliances . . . and thousands of other items ranging from paint to perfume. In short, they improve the general prosperity and welfare of the people of the communities the N&W serves.

The N&W takes pride in the fact that its employees are good, solid citizens . . . good earners . . . good providers — and that the payroll dollars they earn are a substantial factor in the business and private life of the fine communities along the Norfolk and Western Railway.

In addition to the N&W payroll dollars which circulate through the economy of this area, the Norfolk and Western last year spent between $35,000,000 and $40,000,000 for the purchase of materials, supplies and equipment, a considerable part of which was bought in territory served by the railroad.
